EDMONTON BULLETIN, DEC. 17, 1887.

The Medicine Hat Times says: "The Qu'Appelle Progress favors prohibition. We don't see what the people have done to the Progress that Bro. Wiedman should desire to keep immigration out of the North-West." Perhaps the Progress, like the people of Iowa and Kansas, thinks that the best way to encourage immigration is to look carefully after the welfare of the people already in the country.

Reported that a squad of Pinkerton's detectives are employed to guard Joseph Chamberlain, British fisheries commissioner at Washington, day and night. Mr. Chamberlain's life is in danger on account of his having expressed certain opinions on certain public questions of importance in the country over whose political destinies he has some control. Freedom of speech is only allowable in the United States when the speech suits the crowd.

An English M. P., named Caine who visited the North-West during the past summer has been giving his impressions of Calgary, amongst other places. The Tribune is indignant because he pictures it as a respectable, law-abiding, orderly place. Or perhaps it is because Mr. Caine attributes that condition of affairs to the absence of liquor. If he had said, as certain prominent residents of Calgary have said in effect, that the town was the resort of whiskey drinking hoodlums among whom it was impossible to enforce the law the Tribune would have had some reason to kick.

The political situation in Manitoba according to the latest papers received is that Mr. Norquay's jig is up. His usefulness is gone as a political leader. He will need the lieutenant-governorship of the North-West and will probably get it, while other men with a shorter and therefore cleaner record will strive to carry on the government of the province on straight conservative lines that is just as the C. P. R. may happen to desire. If the people of Manitoba are willing to be governed in that way such a method of government is good enough for them. The matter is in their own hands.

The Winnipeg Commercial sees the greatest danger to the R. R. V. railway scheme in the understanding lately said to have been arrived at between the C. P. R. and N. P. R. whereby the former agrees to give up the attempt to secure Puget sound freight in consideration of the latter agreeing to give up the attempt to get into Manitoba. In the face of an agreement as to rates between these companies the Red River Valley railway would only be a sham as a competing line. Taking this view of the case Winnipeg has allowed its chance to slip. But it is poor business to cry over spilt milk. The province is already indebted for the cost of the R. V. R. The N. P. only abandoned the attempt to enter Manitoba when that attempt appeared hopeless. If Manitoba completed her line and ran it as a government work, as it might as well do, the Northern Pacific might not think long about breaking its late agreement with the C. P. R. If the Manitoba people help themselves they will get help, but as long as they remain in the mood of wanting all and giving and risking nothing they will get nothing.

The Lethbridge News has come to the conclusion that the Scott act of eastern Canada is a failure and not less so the attempt at prohibition in the North-West, and therefore it advocates the introduction of a license system into the Territories. Still it says: "That drunkenness is a curse to the country is a point upon which all men will agree." It proposes to do away with the evil by punishing drunkards severely, by establishing asylums for their cure by educating the children to believe that drunkenness is a disgrace and moral degradation. When the News has shown the justice of punishing the man who drinks the liquor which it would have another man specially licensed to sell him; when it has shown why a traffic which makes the establishment of inebriate asylums necessary should be licensed; and when it has shown how children are to be impressed with the degradation resulting from the use of liquor when the traffic in that liquor has the license of the highest authority it will have shown how the difficult task of running with the hare and hunting with the hounds on this temperance question may be accomplished.

PROHIBITION.

The resolution of the North-West council asking for the repeal of the prohibitory liquor law applying to the Territories brought out determined opposition from a considerable number of elected members. And not without good reason. Whatever the opinion of any individual may be regarding the merits of the present law or the method of its enforcement there is a point upon which all are agreed—that the liquor traffic must be controlled; and almost all, that being a social matter the method of control should be decided strictly apart from political questions, as it can only be by a direct vote of the people. The proposition of the council was that the method of control should be fixed not by direct verdict of the people but according to the resolution of the council itself, which was only fractionally representative.

The chief weakness of the present law is that it is not known to be according to the wish of the people most concerned. It is as yet an open question whether the majority favor license or prohibition. Certainly a large number of the people of the towns express themselves in favor of license, and their opinions are for natural reasons more heard of than those of all the remainder. It is a disadvantage as well as an advantage of responsible government that every executive act is measured by its probable political effect. Consequently when a clamor is raised that any certain law is unpopular the executive is careless about rigidly enforcing it. If a popular majority declared for prohibition it would be to the political interest of the executive to carry out their wish; to show whether the law really could or could not be enforced and what advantages or drawbacks were connected with it. If on the other hand the majority favored license, license would no doubt be granted and the traffic would be placed on the footing of legalized respectability which its advocates desire to see it occupy. In either case a definite decision would be reached, and while the question of prohibition vs. license was being decided other interests would not suffer. But if license is substituted for the present system without a direct appeal to the people prohibitionists will have cause of complaint quite as great as pro-license men have now, and there will be a continual jangling, to the special disadvantage of those engaged in the traffic, until the matter has been decided by popular vote. Only those who desired to profit themselves at the general expense could have wished to introduce such a sweeping change on such an important question without the due consideration and definite sanction of the people necessary to give the change when made, whatever it might be, permanent and beneficial effect.

If the resolution of the late council is acted upon the only opportunity for the people to declare themselves on this question will be at the next election to the new Territorial council or assembly. At that election, the first in all probability under a new system of government, there will be many political questions of great importance to be decided. There will be many local questions pressing for consideration on which the general public will be divided. As a solid body having only one object in view the chances of the liquor interest securing a majority in the new council are as favorable as it was in the power of the late council to make them. Should they secure the wished for majority no doubt a license system will be introduced and vested interests created, that while they will strengthen the liquor interest, will be in continual danger of being wiped out at any time that a popular majority in the North-West can be induced to follow the example of so many of the counties of eastern Canada and States of the adjoining republic, to the loss of the investors and the general disarrangement of connected business. Would it not be better for the men who compose the liquor interest themselves to have this matter decided by a straight vote, that if it went in their favor would give them some security for their investments and if it went against them would be a warning not to invest in a losing speculation? The matter can only be finally decided by a popular vote. It will have to be brought to that issue at no distant day. In seeking to shirk a direct vote as long as possible so that men might be induced to invest their means under the impression that they had the support of the majority when really their assistance to create and insure a majority was what was desired, the action of the council was certainly not commendable except on grounds that would justify the sacrifice of a friend in order to gain a point.

While this proposal to mix a social with ordinary political questions at the next local election greatly disadvantages the former it does as much for the latter. There is very little prospect that the responsible government asked for by the council will be granted in the interval, but rather a bureaucracy of some sort. In that case if the Territories are to secure the responsible government and increased subsidy to which they are entitled a very clear and emphatic expression of opinion will be necessary at the local elections. If it had been the leading desire of the council to prevent such a result it could not have devised a better way than by suggesting that the license question be made a companion issue. There are many people who favor license who also favor responsible government, and again there may be prohibitionists who have their doubts about the advantages of that system. In its desire to injure the temperance cause the council has done equal injury to the cause of responsible government which it professed to strongly favor. Had the issues been presented separately both would have been carried or defeated on their separate merits. By presenting them together they are made to fight each other to the advantage of the enemies of both.

The single course open to the opponents of a liquor license system is clear. They did not desire to have this issue forced upon the country at this time or in this way. If the settlement of other questions of importance are deferred by the discussion of this question of license vs. prohibition during the next few months the blame does not rest upon them. Believing that the liquor traffic is a curse, and that the system which licenses, legalizes and makes it respectable is doubly a curse, their duty is, whenever necessary, to let go all other considerations for the time being and form a solid front of opposition to its introduction into these Territories.

Commercial: "There is one way by which the national policy supporters can effectually baffle the advocates of commercial union and that is by a policy tending to lower the present tariff rates. Consumers will gladly pay a moderate tax meant as a protection to home industries, but when the tax reaches the average it is now at, the burden on the pocket is too heavy to admit of sentiment about patronizing home markets. It would take but a moderate reduction in our tariff generally to place commercial union among the political impossibilities, and it would take but a small increase to give the proposed union a popularity, that would insure its becoming a factor much sooner than many of its opponents are prepared to realize.

BATTLE RIVER.

Three inches of snow on the level, and still freighters with wagons are passing on to Calgary. From present appearances there will be four months of feeding stock.

The grain of only one band of Indians has been threshed yet, with the Indian department thresher. Wheat is not very good but barley is well matured. Potatoes are very scarce.

The mission school closed on Tuesday owing to the prevalence of whooping-cough. The pupils read in the first book, parts one and two, write on slates and copy books, read script, take exercises in arithmetic as far as long division including the multiplication table, and study the syllables. Sewing and knitting are also taught the girls by the assistant teacher Miss Neelands.

Willie Lucas, aged 12, son of the Indian agent, lost himself on the evening of the 6th while looking for horses and remained out all night, being found the next morning five miles east of the agency on the south side of the river by Indians who were searching for him. He had ridden across the river to the south side in the evening to where the horses were but could not drive them in. Giving up the attempt he started for home and reached the river below the agency, thinking he was above, and followed it down for some miles. At last fearing he had gone wrong he tied his pony and tried to start a fire but did not succeed. He then lay down on his saddle blanket beside his dog at the upturned root of a tree where the Indians found him, chilled thoroughly but not at all frostbitten. Search for him had begun about 8 o'clock in the evening and was continued until he was found.

The Illustrated London News (American edition) of Nov. 26th is a specially good number. It has sketches of the effects of the storm on the Mersey on Nov. 1st; of the lord mayor of London's show; a full page picture of a horse and bicycle race, the horse ridden by one of Buffalo Bill's men; a full page portrait of the late Jenny Lind, and sketches of her most celebrated characters; sketches of events in the Prince of Wales' tour through Devon and Cornwall; a page of cartoons supposed to represent various scenes in the fox hunt taken part in lately by two of Buffalo Bill's men, one of the richest things ever seen in print; sketches in Venice in Ireland, and finally a half page portrait of the gorilla at the Zoological society's gardens, which is not calculated to make the veriest blue blood wish to trace back his ancestry quite so far.

A proposition is on foot to construct a branch of the Nanaimo & Esquimalt railway on Vancouver island to a point on the Straits of Fuca only ten miles distant from Port Angeles, Washington Territory, to which it is proposed to build a branch of the American system of railways. A transfer boat would convey trains across this strait in half an hour. The completion of this project would give Victoria that commanding position as the main competing point on the north Pacific coast that properly belongs to it, giving it a choice of either the Canada Pacific or the Northern Pacific. But perhaps the charter of the proposed railway will be disallowed.

Qu'Appelle Progress: Two farmers at Edgeley have been squabbling over some hay cut by one of them. The other man held a permit to cut hay on the section and thought to appropriate his neighbor's labor. The result was an appeal to the law. The magistrates decided that the hay belonged to the man who cut it, and that the other one would have to pay for all the hay he took and the costs of the case besides.

S. J. Hogg, lumber merchant of Calgary, died of pleurisy on Tuesday, 6th inst., after a short illness. He was a member of the first municipal council of Calgary, and was a member of the board of school trustees at the time of his death.

The Qu'Appelle Progress gives an account of a late attempt at tenant eviction in that neighborhood which was unsuccessful owing to the tenant calling in the assistance of an army musket.

The C. P. R. express from the coast on Saturday Dec. 3rd was cancelled owing to the smashing of a trestle bridge near Yale by a large fragment of rock falling on it.

Eastman and party arrived at Red Deer lately from the Brazeau river where they had been exploring the timber limits of the Alberta lumber company.

The Moosomin Courier says: "Water is scarce here, and if snow does not fall shortly the town will be in a nice fix."

The MacLeod Gazette wants that town incorporated. The Calgary Tribune says, "Don't."

A. E. Shelton, councillor, is out for mayor of Calgary against the present incumbent, G. C. King.

A union thanksgiving service in Calgary recently netted the hospital $5.15.

LOCAL.

The auction sale of east horses at Ft. Saskatchewan on Friday of last week resulted in the horses realizing $38, $40 and $51 respectively.

AMABLE LAMOURNEUX of Sturgeon river recently lost by inflammation of the lungs a valuable black stallion which he imported four and a half years ago.

Stags arrived Monday evening on time. D. McNaught passenger. Owing to a snow storm on Thursday only half a day's drive was made to Dixon's stopping place.

Stocks of holiday goods in town are larger and more complete in all lines than ever before and trade is fairly good considering the hard times. Last year the Christmas goods arrived about the second week in January.

As W. West was hauling water on Monday the wagon which he was using slid off Ross' grade where the bank was steepest and rolled to the bottom. No damage was done to the horses.

J. B. COURTEPATTE of St. Albert settlement had a cow killed and almost entirely eaten by a large timber wolf lately, only a few hundred yards from his house. The wolf was seen but escaped.

A party to go to the Yukon next spring is being talked of in town. The idea is to go down the Athabasca and Mackenzie and up either the Liard or the Peel river to reach the waters of the Yukon.

The new skating rink is now in first-class condition, and will open on Tuesday evening next. It is proposed to hold a grand masquerade carnival some time between Christmas and New Years, probably on the 27th.

COL. W. D. JARVIS who established the mounted police post at Ft. Saskatchewan and was in charge there for a number of years, arrived from Calgary and Toronto on Thursday. He will spend the winter with his son, R. Jarvis of Clover Bar.

NEXT week will be examination week at the public school, and on Friday the prizes will be distributed. Visitors, especially parents of children attending, will be welcome any time. Over $40 worth of prizes have been purchased by the trustees from E. Raymer & Co.

The Tribune mentions that there was a great rush to secure $60 excursion tickets at Calgary on Monday the 5th. Only five out of about twenty-five applicants were successful. P. V. Gaudreau of Edmonton being one of those. The company had given notice that tickets should be secured in advance, having expected a rush.

WHEN a farmer of this part of the country takes in his stock for the winter he sometimes finds an estray among them. If such an one has been running with his own stock during the summer it is impossible to get rid of it in the fall, when there is no feed away from the farm yard. The farmer, partly to rid himself of the pest and partly to oblige the owner, advertises the estray. The owner having thus been informed of the animal's whereabouts, in many cases thinks it smart to take the first opportunity when the farmer is out of sight to drive his animal away without settling for the trouble to which his neighbor has been put or for the $1 advertisement which was the means of his recovering his property, and for which his neighbor has to pay. This game has been played so often that farmers are becoming careless about advertising estrays, preferring to dog them away to trusting to the honesty of the owner for the recovery of the expenses of taking care of and advertising them. The man who saves a five dollar bill one season by such sharp practice may lose a forty dollar ox the next season on that account. Honesty even in such a little thing as this is the best policy in the long run.

D. Ross of the Edmonton hotel arrived from Calgary and Montreal on Thursday, brought in by D. McLeod's outfit. He was treated by Dr. Fuller of Montreal for his eyesight so successfully that his sight is now completely restored and he has every confidence in a permanent cure being effected. Senator Turner, of Hamilton, father of John T. Turner of Clover Bar, whom he saw in the east, is also suffering from impaired eyesight caused by cataract, but hopes to have an operation performed in a few months that will restore his sight. The train upon which Mr. Ross left Winnipeg was timed to catch the Edmonton stage at Calgary on Thursday morning, but at Antelope siding, west of Swift Current, a car standing on the siding had been moved by the wind so that a portion of it was on the main track. When the passenger train came along about ten o'clock at night it was derailed by the collision, but fortunately no one was injured. No fire broke out and comparatively little damage was done. A wrecking train was sent out from Swift Current at once but it was four o'clock on Thursday morning before the passengers started west again and it was Thursday night before they reached Calgary, when of course the stage had left. There had been snow along the railway line but a Chinook on Wednesday took it nearly all away.

THE government has on hand here the wire of the old telegraph line from Leduc to Peace hills. There is nearly double as much lying at various points between here and Pitt, being over what was required for the construction of the line now in use, with insulators and brackets to match. All this wire is of the very best quality, and there is no sign that it is required for any purpose. It is enough, with a portion of the wire of the old line to Battleford also lying unused, to extend the telegraph service to the Athabasca landing. If this town has any one interest more important than another it is to have the best and closest means of communication with the Landing as soon as possible. Now that there is a passable road the next most important thing to be secured is telegraphic communication. The expense, considering that the wire, insulators and brackets are on hand, and that tamarac poles could be secured all along the 90 miles most easily, could not be great. The matter should be brought before the superintendent of telegraphs at once.

GENERAL.

Sanit coal sells at $10 a ton at Regina. Two cases of leprosy are reported in Minnesota.

Navigation on Lake Superior closed on Dec. 2nd.

The Cochrane ranch company have branded 1,700 calves this season.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., has repealed the Scott act by a small majority.

Lord Wolseley is writing a life of the Duke of Marlborough—the first not the present one.

Beach has retired from boat racing. Hanlan has challenged Kemp, another Australian.

The National club of Toronto has invited Hon. Jos. Chamberlain to a complimentary dinner.

Chapleau, secretary of state is about to sue L'Electeur for libel, for calling him a debauchee.

The Medicine Hat Times has entered upon its second year. The Times is one of the latest papers in the country.

The Alberta Stock Journal says that many horses are missing off the High river range, one party being out 75 head.

At Huron, Dakota, on Nov. 30th John D. Gowan and his sixteen year old daughter were found dead in their home frozen stiff. They had been suffocated by coal gas.

Mr. Davin claims to have secured from the government a part promise that the order closing North-West hop beer breweries would be rescinded.

Hamilton Spectator: "Montreal has 1,200 licensed places where liquor is sold, and about 300 places where it is sold without a license—one to every 133 of the population." Illicit liquor appears to flourish under a low license as well as under prohibition.

The Beaver silver mine of Port Arthur has 2½ millions of dollars worth of ore in sight and pays 24 per cent. on $2,000,000. The poorest ore yields $100 to the ton and the richest two or three thousand. A ten stamp mill is now running with improved machinery, and 175 men are employed on the works.

Speaking of the advisability of the government taking steps to render bank bills a safe circulating medium, the Toronto World says: "It is the duty of a government to govern and not to permit important affairs to drift as best they can." This exactly expresses the idea of the prohibitionists on the liquor question.

L. O. David, the instigator of the Rielle movement in Quebec, writes to L'Electeur against the attacks made upon the Salvation army. "He believes that French Canadians should show the superiority of their religion by serious works and not by throwing stones at inoffensive people, especially women." Mr. David's head is level this time.

The Regina Journal of Dec. 1st counts up the total building improvements in that town for the season and makes the amount $40,000, of which about $45,000 is on government buildings of various descriptions, and the remainder, $41,000, by private parties. Ten dwellings run from $1,000 to $2,700. The bulk of the private expenditures are from $100 to $1,000.

The fire which burned down the mounted police riding school at Regina is said to have originated in one of the saddle rooms occupied by B troop. A stove had been put up, but the necessary preparations for safely using it had not been made. Someone not knowing of its unprepared condition started a fire in it which burned down the building. The appliances connected with the barracks for putting out fires were not in order so that the best that could be done was to save the contents of the building. A new building is to be erected immediately. Eight hundred pounds of gunpowder which was stored in the building at the time of the fire was saved.

Colter, the defeated liberal candidate in Haldimand, Ont., has decided to protest Dr. Montague's election. The successful candidate had a majority of twelve on a re-count.

The first anniversary number of the Alberta Live Stock Journal is to hand. The Journal says that the heavy losses in Montana and Wyoming last winter were the means of keeping out the herds of cattle that were expected to occupy the Red Deer and Maple Creek countries. The loss in those territories is estimated at 80 per cent. The losses in the North-West were not nearly so heavy, but the calf crop has been very short. The opening of the Montreal market for North-West beef has been the event of the season. The price obtained at Montreal was two cents a pound over Chicago prices of the same date. Sheep are reported to be in good condition for entering the winter, entirely free from disease, and large quantities of hay have been put up for their use. Wool is very low, and the Journal wants the N.P. amended so as to increase the price. Horse breeders have done well during the past season in bringing their herds up to the standard required by the British army officers who visited the country. First-class mares have been brought in from every direction, and thirty-two thorough-bred stallions were imported.

LAND in and around Kamloops, B. C., is assessed at $15 an acre by the local government, improvements taken at cost and added to the value. Pasture land at $3 and $2. In Grand Prairie district, land cultivated and that can be cultivated, are assessed at $7 an acre and pasture lands at $2. Lands up the North Thompson river a certain distance are valued at the same rate. Horses are assessed at $20 apiece. In British Columbia there is no municipal system as in the eastern provinces. The settled districts that would naturally be formed into separate municipalities are divided from each other by wide distances and serious natural obstacles. The chief business of such municipalities would be to open up communication with each other, and there would be never-ending disputes as to the proportion of work to be done by each. The local government attends to the construction of such works, and consequently is compelled to levy direct taxation to defray the expense. The taxes are heavy, but the country is being opened up and the people get the worth of their money.

In its issue of Nov. 23rd E. E. Sheppard announces his retirement from the Toronto News as proprietor and editor. He attributes his retirement to the persecution to which he was subjected by the officers of the 65th battalion on account of a libellous article which appeared in his paper in '85. He says: "I have nothing to complain of. My creditors and the general public have treated me well. The circulation and success of the paper has proven that it was not a wild venture, though circumstances have made it impossible for me to reap the reward of four years of unremitting labor. I thank my readers and business friends for their kindness and confidence. In a business way I have tried to deal honorably with everyone, and I retire from this venture feeling sure that no one can put their finger on a spot in my commercial reputation. Editorially I may have been bitter, and, without knowing it, unjust; but I have tried to do right and to tell the truth. Wherein I have failed I ask to be forgiven. It is not an easy thing to part with the creation of one's efforts and ambitions, but as fate sometimes snatches from us our dearest babes and best loved friends, so, it often robs us of our brightest ideals and most cherished hopes." Although Mr. Sheppard's attempt to establish and retain control of a paper which should take a, or perhaps the, leading place in Canada has failed, his efforts have shown the possibilities that exist as well as the mistakes that must be avoided. In the four years of labor to which he alludes he has established for himself a reputation as a political writer and editor second to none in the country. He has done much to break down the narrow bounds of party prejudice and induce a freer and more self-reliant mode of thought, and in so far as he has done so he has benefitted his native land. He speaks of turning his attention to some other branch of literature. Should he do so, by his connection with the News he has secured a large and ready hearing.
